A Note From Rev. Roni

Have you ever felt or sensed the sacred, or felt the Spirit in music that isn't formally classified as sacred or church music? An ensemble from the Interlink Choir will be performing select pieces from their Spring concert, as part of our Pentecost Service. Listen for the Spirit, as the choir sings "Thankful" popularized by Josh Groban. Be attentive to the Spirit lurking behind the lyrics of "Tuimbe" (Swahili for "Let There Be Music") and other selections.

The Spirit working through those just outside the immediate circle surprises us, and it is consistent with the coming of the Spirit at Pentecost. The Holy Spirit empowers the early followers of Jesus to share the good news of Jesus in the language of the surrounding culture. What are the languages of our culture today? Join us, along with members of the Interlink Choir and Heather Gardner, as we celebrate the birthing of the church, 10:30 am. Communion will be served at this special service of worship.

Please wear red or a vibrant fiery colour to mark this Holy Day in our faith.

A NOTE FROM RUTH TROTTER

One of the ways Emmanuel people can make the neighbourhood aware that we are part of our neighbourhood is by blooming where we are planted. At the visioning meeting last week, I mentioned that I have a guerilla garden on the highway property on the side of Thibeault Hill. About ten years ago, I realized that I missed watching bulbs and seeds come to life in the spring and summer. Because I live in a condo building, I don't have a yard to putter in but there is a wild space between our parking lot and the rocks on the side of the highway. I planted some tulip bulbs in the bush in front of my car and they still put on a show after the snow melts. I bought some triple mix and tried a rock garden but that didn't work well. I tried another spot near the dumpster with perennials and a few pansies. Someone left 6 empty flowerpots, so I filled them with earth and planted some seeds. Someone else left garden ornaments there. I got to meet some of my neighbours when I was puttering away.

Every year, the snow plow piles the snow from the visitors' parking lot on top of my garden. It managed to smash the flowerpots and move things around, so I never know what I'll find in the spring but last year I planted some daffodil bulbs and this year they put on quite a show. I noticed that the lupines have moved about 3 feet away from where I planted them and who knows what else has survived to bloom this summer? Have I given you any ideas?
